The field of dentistry is no longer limited to treating disease and restoring lost function. Many of our patients are interested in complementing their appearance through new and innovative procedures that our field has to offer.

- ◆ Tooth colored restorations are preferred by many patients over gold or amalgam.
- ◆ Bleaching procedures can improve chronic staining.
- ◆ Laminates and crowns can alter tooth morphology and correct severe discoloration.
- ◆ Orthodontics can help create a more ideal alignment.

In many cases, simply changing or creating a restoration is not enough to achieve the esthetics that we or our patients may desire. The gingival architecture plays a critical role in complementing the final restoration. There are several indications for periodontal plastic procedures which can help to provide a superior final result.

Loss of interdental papilla

Facial gingival recession

Gingival color change

Gingival margin asymmetry

Excessive gingival display

Ridge deficiency under pontics
